Next week, in writing, we are going to start creating a narrative, based on 'The Daydreamer' by Ian McEwan.

To get a head start, we are going to read some of it this week in guided reading.

'The Daydreamer' is a story about a boy growing up. It's made up of lots of individual daydreams, so each chapter stands alone - this means that you don't need to have read the previous chapters to understand the following ones. In each chapter, Peter learns a life lesson.

Today we will read 'Introducing Peter', which is Chapter 1.

Lesson I W

WALT discuss the structure of a story

Start by just listening to the first chapter - no writing, just listening and taking it in.

Listen to 'Introducing Peter'.

Now you've listened to it once, listen again and create a mindmap on the following:

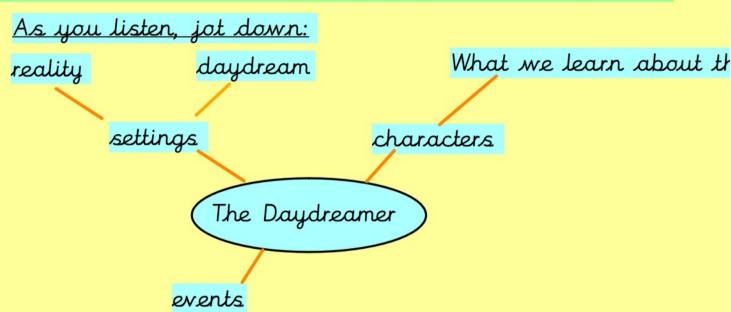

Make sure you split up reality and the daydream! There is a planning sheet you can use if you'd like to!

WALT discuss the structure of a story

What happens at the beginning of the daydream?

Peter and Kate are getting the bus going to school.

What causes Peter to begin daydreaming?

What happens in the daydream?

What causes the daydream to end?

The first one is filled in for you. You think about the rest.

What is the link between the real world and Peter's daydream?

Reality

What does Peter learn at the end of the daydream?
