The dark night air was still and Lyra could feel the coldness of the stone wall as she leaned against it. Around her fell gentle snowflakes that sparkled in the dim light yet Lyra didn't notice them. Instantly she listened to a whispered conversation - she discovered some important information. Because of what she had heard Lyra feared she was no longer safe. She knew she had to leave so she started to move silently. But a large figure appeared.

~~The~~ The silent, dark town had the sense of fear. Beneath the floors layed the deadly spirit, but then brightness shined from the east. Lyra hid somewhere secure from that wild creature, it got closer every second. Since she knew it was going to get ~~her~~ her, she tried to get inside the building. ~~With a gentle knock on the door~~ An idea popped into her head but she knew it wouldn't be the ~~best~~ safest choice. A risk she would regret.
