WALT: predict what might happen from the details given and implied.
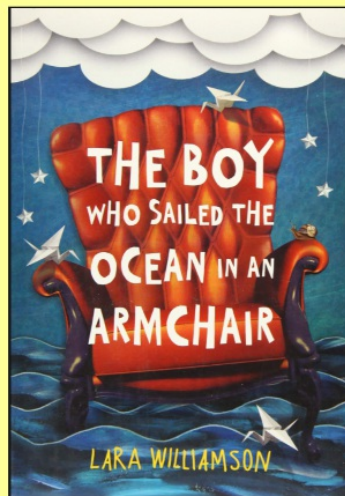

Some of you may have been told that our class read would be 'Hugo Cabret'.

Because this is mostly pictures, and we would love you to have a book read to you whilst at home, we have decided to change it to 'The Boy Who Sailed the Ocean in an Armchair' by Lara Williamson.

Lesson 1

WALT: predict what might happen from the details given and implied.

Today you will be making a prediction on what this book could be about.

You will have the image of the front cover, as well as the blurb to make your predictions.

Remember, your predictions MUST be based on what the blurb tells you, or what the image suggests.

If you've read this book before, we need you to try and forget what you know, and just focus on what is in front of you.

WALT: predict what might happen from the details given and implied.

Becket Rumsey is all at sea.

His dad has run away with him and his brother Billy in the middle of the night. And they've left everything behind, including their almost-mum Pearl. Becket has no idea what's going on – it's a mystery.

So with the help of Billy and a snail called Brian, Becket sets out on a journey of discovery. It's not plain sailing but then what journeys ever are?

A story of new beginnings, and learning that goodbye isn't always the end, from the bestselling author of A BOY CALLED HOPE

Lesson 1

WALT: predict what might happen from the details given and implied.

Things to think about:
- Look closely at the front cover. Are there any particular items you can pick up on?
- What does the title suggest it could be about?
- Look at the characters listed in the blurb - can you get any information from them? What might they be like?
- Can you find out what sort of genre this book might be?

Remember, you MUST tell me how you have come to these conclusions - if you think that Becket Rumsey might be older than his brother, Billy, WHY do you think that? Use the text/picture.
